

NECESSARY LUXURY

It's become a ritual before every show that I brush with my Sonicare toothbrush. I like to be minty-fresh when I walk out on that stage.

I love art and design. As a magician, I love playing cards. My Artisan Playing Cards are the best ever produced, trust me—and a mix of both my passions. Want a pack? They're available at theory11.com.

De Viribus Quantitatis, by Luca Pacioli, is important to me not only for what it is—one of the first books on magic, from the late 15th century—but also for who helped write it: Leonardo da Vinci. It validates so much of what I do, that hundreds of years ago, among science, sculpture, art and music, da Vinci was passionate about magic.

I built the most amazing movie theater on the island I own in the Bahamas, called Musha Cay. I've named it Dave's Drive-In—it's a shameless plug, I admit—and for me it's the most beautiful place in the world to watch a movie.

David Copperfield

FAMED MAGICIAN, MASTER ILLUSIONIST

"I've been fortunate to receive many awards over the years, but my most precious statue is not for me. It is in my collection, though: the 1943 Oscar for Casablanca, one of the greatest films of all time. I get so much inspiration from movies, and this is my own constant reminder of what excellent art can achieve. It's not magic, but to me it's magical."
